MSDIS General News

As is typical, December was an extremely quiet month for MSDIS. We continued to monitor the website and servers throughout the holiday season, and pushed new datasets into distribution as they became available from our colleagues in Jefferson City.

Since we have already received our first new dataset of 2021, please note that we will begin the annual process of swapping last year's data out with updated versions. As we have done in the past, the 2020 downloads available through Open Data will be replaced as new data become available. 2020 data services will run parallel with 2021 updates on a limited basis so our users can update their map documents, apps, and other projects.

MSDIS Downtime

No outages were reported during December 2020, however we did receive an isolated email on the afternoon of Friday 11 December that imagery services were noticeably slow. After investigating the issue, we were able to confirm that some of the more complex imagery services were operating slower than they should, but none were outright offline. The issue seemed to resolve itself shortly after it was reported, though we continued checking throughout the weekend. Given the timing of the event (late in the afternoon on a Friday in December), there is the very real possibility that the slowdown was the result of some form of maintenance being done by the Division of IT. Whatever the case, we have not received any similar complaints since then.
